“Conduct yourselves honourably among the pagans, so that in cases where they speak against you as ‘those who do what is evil’ they will, by observing your good works, glorify God on the Day of Visitation.”

1 Peter 2:12.

In the earliest days of the faith, the Church faced constant opposition, pressure, and persecution from the pagan cultures around it, be they Roman or Greek. Roman emperors like Decius persecuted the Church with violence and martyrdom. Others, like Valerian, simply legislated against them, making civic life incredibly difficult.

Christians were seen as a strange Jewish cult, one which was dangerous to the lifestyle of the empire, a lifestyle which included worship of many gods, rampant sexual immorality, and a might-makes-right attitude towards others. The moral beauty of the Christian life and their outreaching, all-encompassing love for one another and those around them (particularly the most vulnerable in society) had a deep effect on Roman culture. They were people transformed by the Gospel of Christ who likewise went out and transformed their world, starting hospitals, adopting abandoned babies, feeding the hungry, and living lives of impeccable purity. That Gospel way of life changed the world in the first three centuries. It can do so again in our day and any
